

Every Time I Hear the Rain

Every time I hear the rain, I keep thinking of you
Every drop that falls down just breaks my heart in two
Just the sound of a storm is enough to cause me such pain
And it happens just this way every time I hear the rain.

It was pouring just like this when you went away
And it's been cloudy and cold now every single day
Every roar of thunder feels like a knife piercing deep in my heart
And only you can keep me from falling apart.

My life is always cloudy now the sky is never blue
And the only way the sun could return is following after you.

I hope and pray someday you'll return to me again
Cause all I am right now is just a lonely man.
Is that footsteps I hear as I rush and press my face to the window pane
It's just the same sound from the sky every time I hear the rain
It's just the same drops from my eyes every time I hear the rain.
